Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from American Policy in Nicaragua The necessity for putting an end to the constant disorders in Central America and thereby removing the liability of European interference in those republics has been generally recognized, and numerous plans have been proposed to bring about such a happy result. For many years the United States was content with making mere representations to the belligerents or expressing grave concern for the safety of its citizens; then naval vessels were sent to the troubled regions to look out for the protection of any Americans or foreigners that might be within reach of their guns, or to protest occasionally against barbarities committed by the combatants, but more often to carry away the vanquished chiefs in order to save them from execution by their victorious enemies. A further step in the interest of peace was taken when the belligerents were invited aboard these vessels to discuss and compose their differences with the friendly counsel of naval and diplomatic officers of the United States; and inasmuch as it was believed to be desirable to...
