In statuary porcelain, or Parian--a most interesting and almost new application, --we have in addition to numerous good examples of known groups and single figures, some very fine specimens of the application of china to the multiplication of some of the purest specimens of high art. The statues of the Pleiades, Ino and Bacchus, the Return of the Prodigal, and a Grecian tripod, may be regarded as remarkable examples in this line, since the difficulties which arise in the designing of the figure, the finished one being one-third less in size than when in damp...
